

SURGICAL RETRACTOR

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The present invention relates to a surgical retractor that immobilizes tissue at a surgical site. A preferred embodiment of the retractor is used during minimally invasive
5 direct coronary bypass procedures to arrest movement of the grafting site while the heart continues pumping. Tape or thread can be used to connect the artery to the retractor with a holder.

06307195 050799
662050 56720260